RECOLLECTIONS OF A JOURNEY THROUGH TARTARY, THIBET AND CHINA, during the years 1844, 1845 and 1846. By M. Huc, Missionary Priest of the Congregation of 8t. Lazarus.
This narrative, related with great interest and simplicity—adding to our original stores of information with the piquancy of an Arabian Tale—is the story of a long journey and circuit of Chinese Tarrity to the capital of Tablet, with a forced return to the Chinese Territory, performed by a Roman Catholic dissionary, and his assistant, 26. Gisbet, delegated, upor the breaking up of the Pekia Mission to the exploration of what is rather hypothetically called the Apostelical Vicariat of Magnolia. On their route stray where is novelty, danger and excitement—fresh rocesery, fresh adventure, with religious rites and manners and cratemas, now for the feat times to fully described, and which, it may be remarked, at times appeal not merely to cur love of intelligence, but to our love of the marvelous. Says The Edmonry Revence; "A more interesting as well as develing book has seldom issues from the press. Its information is conveyed in such an incatavatible armin of good humor and fun as amply to repay the perusal of any class of readers. In these points M. Huc bears some resemblance to his English and esake, Theodore, as we may almost each him."

The London Dairly News pronounces of M. Huc "a most agreeable narrator. We give our renders a specimen of this really charming book, though it is one which most of our renders will be sure to purchase and treasure up for themselves. We could fill columns with amounting extracts, but it is best to send our renders to the book itself."

JAMES'S NEW CHARMING NOVEL -Third Edition now ready.
A STORY WITHOUT A MAJE. By G. P. R. James,
Esq. Price N' cents.
"It is decidedly one of the most finished of the numerous works of this popular and fertile nevelist. James has drawn few characters of more surpansing loveliness than the heroipe, Emily Hastirgs; nor has he ever portrayed the converse of all we admire in weman, with a bolder hand than the portrait he exhibits in Mrs. Hazleton. The male characters, too, stand out in his pictorial group, individualized and charactered. The story is, as in usual with this writer, one of absorbing and never-flagging interest.
In this peculiar charm of a movellet's power, James is certairly a master in his art, and this last effort of his genius shows an undiminished and an apparently inezhaustible capability of inventive power." [Home Journal.
